Students entering the practice of this Hospital shall (unless exempted for special reasons) do so upon the understanding that it is their intention to obtain the Dental Diploma of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. Before commencing their course of Studies they must sign their names as willing to conform to this rule and to the following regulations :—

2. Students must be regular in their attendance at the Hospital daily. An Attendance Book is provided, in which Students must sign their names.

3. No Student shall undertake any operation until he has attended a Course of Demonstrations to the satisfaction of the Medical Committee.

4. No Student shall, under any circumstances, receive fee or remuneration from any Patient attending, or to whom he may become known whilst attending the Hospital, and no mechanical work shall be supplied to a Patient by a Student of the Hospital, except under the supervision of and by the direction of a Member of the Staff. No Student may under any circumstances recommend to patients Dentists outside the Hospital, nor shall he give the name and address of himself or any fellow Students to patients attending the Hospital.

5. Students must arrange with the Dean about Dresserships; they must be punctual and regular in their appointments with Patients, and in attendance on the days on which they hold Dresserships; otherwise other Students will be appointed.

6. All instruments and appliances the property of the Hospital shall, after having been used by a Student, be returned to their places.

PRACTICAL DENTAL MECHANICS.

Students who have obtained their mechanical training with private practitioners are required to make and adapt to the mouth dentures for at least six patients. In this work the students are supervised by one of the Curators, the work in the mouth being carried out under the care of one of the Dental Surgeons. A coaching class is held before all examinations by one of the Curators.

PUPILS' DEPARTMENT.

Pupils taking the two years' training in Dental Mechanics are placed under the direct supervision of a special Sub-Committee.

Their course has been carefully arranged, and embraces the study of Dental Mechanics, both theoretical and practical.

In order to more completely equip the pupil, he is required to attend a course of Dental Metallurgy at the School during his pupilage, and is required to carry out himself the preparation and manufacture of solders, &c., that he may require for his work.

When the pupil has satisfied those who are in charge with his knowledge, both practical and theoretical, he is permitted to make dentures for the mouth. The patients who come to be attended in the Appliance Department in the afternoons, under the different Dental Surgeons, are reserved entirely for this Department; the pupil learns all the details of impression-taking, taking the articulation and final adjusting of the dentures which he himself makes. The practice in the Appliance Department provides the widest variety of mechanical work, in vulcanite, plate and continuous gum.

while there are frequent opportunities of the student gaining experience in the rarer mechanical devices, obturators, &c.

Pupils must obtain their own tools. A list of the "kit" required by the Committee can be obtained on application to the Dean.

The Student on the completion of this course is then allowed to operate in the mouth.

Students must obtain their own instruments. A list of the "kit" required by the Committee can be obtained on application to the Dean.

THE STEPS NECESSARY TO QUALIFY AS A DENTAL PRACTITIONER.

I. PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION IN ARTS.

This should be passed before leaving school.

Requirements as to the subjects of general Education to be included in the recognized Preliminary Examination in Arts.

Subject to the conditions indicated in the List (p. 30), Clause 9, the Preliminary Examinations recognized by the General Medical Council are required to include the following :—

(a) English (Grammar; Paraphrasing; Composition; questions on the History and Geography of Great Britain and Ireland).

(b) Latin (Grammar; Translation into English from unprescribed Latin books; Translation into Latin from English.)*

(c) Mathematics (Arithmetic; Algebra, including easy quadratic Equations; Geometry, including the subject-matter of Euclid, Books I, II, III, and simple deductions).

(α) Greek (Grammar; Translation into English from unprescribed Greek books; Translation into Greek from English).

(β) A Modern Language (Grammar; Translation into English from unprescribed books; Translation from English).

* The Royal College of Physicians of London and the Royal College of Surgeons of England have resolved that Latin shall, in future, be an optional subject in the Preliminary Examination required by them for the L.R.C.P., M.R.C.S., and L.D.S. Diplomas.

II. REGISTRATION AS A STUDENT. For details see p. 31.

This cannot be carried out until the Preliminary Examination has been passed and the student has commenced his professional training.

III. PROFESSIONAL TRAINING. This must occupy a period of at least four years and may be divided into :—

a. Chemistry and Physics.
b. Tuition in Dental Mechanics.
c. General Hospital Lectures and Practice.
d. Dental Hospital Lectures and Practice.

1st and 2nd Year.

a. Chemistry and Physics (see p. 32.) This must be taken before the commencement of (c) and (d).

b. Tuition in Dental Mechanics must extend over a period of two years, and may be carried out either :—

(1) With a registered Dental Practitioner, or
(2) At a recognized Dental Hospital.

The latter course is strongly recommended, since the teaching is better than that generally obtained with a practitioner, and enables the student to present himself for the First Professional Examination at the end of the two years.

The lectures in Metallurgy should be taken during this period, and the examination in this subject passed before the completion of the two years.

3rd and 4th Years.

c. General Hospital Lectures and Practice. The student must carry out courses of study in General Anatomy, Physiology and Histology, extending over a period of at least six months, and subsequent to these, courses of lectures on Surgery and Medicine, the practice of Surgery and Clinical Lectures on Surgery for twelve months, during the ordinary sessions at a recognized Medical School.

d. Dental Hospital Lectures and Practice. This also extends over a period of two years, and is taken concurrently with the general Hospital work.

IV. PROFESSIONAL EXAMINATIONS:—

a. Preliminary Science Examination—

Subjects. Chemistry and Physics.

In the case of those students commencing on or after October 1, 1913, this Examination must be passed before any portion of the work for the Final Examination can be commenced.

b. First Professional Examination.

Subjects. Dental Mechanics, Dental Metallurgy, General Anatomy and Physiology, Dental Anatomy and Physiology.

This may be taken in three parts : Dental Metallurgy, after attending the requisite lectures, at any time subsequent to having passed the Preliminary Science Examination—and it is strongly advised that even in the case of pupils of private practitioners they should attend the lectures during the period of their pupilage.

In the case of pupils of the Hospital, the Examination in Dental Mechanics should be passed at the end of the two years' study of Dental Mechanics—in the case of pupils of private practitioners, six months after joining the Dental Hospital.

Both Hospital pupils and pupils of private practitioners should at the end of their two years' Mechanical tuition join a Medical School, and prepare for the examination in General and Dental Anatomy and Physiology six months after joining the Dental Hospital.

c. Final Professional Examinations.

(1) In Medical Subjects, should be passed at the completion of two winter sessions and one summer session, and must be passed prior to (2).

(2) In Dental Subjects, which should be passed at the completion of the two years' Dental Hospital work.

On the completion of this Examination the Student is entitled to the Diploma in Dental Surgery (L.D.S.).

For full details of these examinations see pp. 32-38.

V. REGISTRATION AS A DENTAL PRACTITIONER :—

The attainment of the L.D.S. Diploma does not legally entitle the holder to use his titles or in any way to hold himself out as specially qualified to practise. It is necessary to obtain registration on the "Dentists' Register."

Necessary forms for registration may be obtained at the Offices of the General Medical Council, 44, Hallam Street, W.

ADVICE TO STUDENTS INTENDING TO TAKE THE L.D.S.

The preliminary examination having been passed, the student should commence his training in dental mechanics at a recognized Dental School. He should then register as a dental student at the General Medical Council, the commencement of professional study being certified by the recognized official of the Dental School.

The training in dental mechanics and the instruction in chemistry, practical chemistry and physics may be taken before registration, but the time spent previous to registration as a student will not count towards the four years that is required to elapse between registration and the final examination.

The following course of study is recommended, but it is not possible nor is it intended to lay down any hard or fast rule.

The student registers and then commences his training in elementary dental mechanics. During this period he obtains instruction in chemistry and physics in the School, and should during his first year pass the preliminary science examination for the L.D.S. Immediately on commencing the study of chemistry and physics the student should register as a medical student, in order that he may be in a position, should he wish, to take a medical qualification at some future time. The work which has to be carried out for the dental curriculum is, to a great extent, the same as that required for the medical qualification, and counts as part of the medical curriculum. As an additional subject, the study of biology is advised.

His second year should be devoted to his training in dental mechanics; he should attend the lectures in dental mechanics and dental metallurgy and at the end of eighteen months pass in metallurgy, and of two years in dental mechanics. At the commencement of the third year the General Hospital should be joined and a start made to learn operative dental surgery by attending the classes in that subject, and the remainder of the third year and the fourth year should be devoted to completing the various courses and lectures required by the curriculum, so that he can be in a position to present himself for the final dental examination at the end of the fourth year.

STUDENTS TAKING THEIR TRAINING IN DENTAL MECHANICS WITH A REGISTERED DENTAL PRACTITIONER.

The student registers and then commences his training in dental mechanics.

During his first year he should, if possible, obtain instruction in chemistry and physics at an institution recognized by the Royal College of Surgeons, and pass the preliminary science examinations. The student is advised to register as a medical student directly he commences his instruction in chemistry and physics, in order that he may be in a position, should he wish to take a medical qualification at some future time. The work which has to be carried out for the dental curriculum is to a great extent the same as that required for the medical qualification and counts as part of the medical curriculum. If it is not possible to obtain instruction in chemistry and physics then the student is strongly advised to commence studying these subjects with some competent teacher, for, although such teaching does not excuse attendance on recognized lectures, &c., nevertheless it will be of the greatest assistance to the student when he commences a recognized course of instruction. This examination must be passed prior to the commencement of the two years' hospital course for the final examination. Students are strongly advised, if they have not attended the recognized course, to attend these at the hospital, and to devote the first six months to the study of these subjects and to preparing for the first professional examination.

If the student has been able to pass the preliminary science examination during the first year of his training he should, if possible, during the last six months of the second year attend the lectures on dental mechanics and metallurgy at a recognized dental school. The student will then be in a position to pass Part II of the first professional examination (dental metallurgy) at the end of his training in dental mechanics. Having passed this examination, the General Hospital should be joined and surgical work commenced at the Dental Hospital. The third and fourth years are to be devoted to completing the various lectures and courses required by the curriculum so that the student may present himself for the final dental examination at the end of the fourth year.

Students commencing their work on or after October 1, 1913, cannot commence the two years' Hospital Practice required for the Final Professional Examination until they have passed the Preliminary Science Examination.

STUDENTS TAKING THE L.D.S., TOGETHER WITH A MEDICAL QUALIFICATION.

When possible the student is advised in addition to obtaining the dental qualification to extend his curriculum and obtain a diploma in medicine. The conjoint diploma L.R.C.P., M.R.C.S., is usually taken, and the alterations made in recent years by the Royal College of Surgeons of England in the dental curriculum have given the dental student a greater opportunity of taking in addition to the L.D.S. the conjoint diploma.

The attention of those who have passed the matriculation examination of the University of London may be called to the degree granted by this University in dental subjects. Such a student should prepare himself for the preliminary scientific examination during his pupilage.

Those students who have passed the first and second examinations for the conjoint diploma will not be examined in anatomy and physiology at the examination for the dental diploma.

The following course of study is recommended :—

During the tuition in dental mechanics the student should receive instruction in chemistry and physics, together with biology, and should pass the first professional examination* for the conjoint diploma during his first year. He should then obtain instruction in pharmacy, and having passed the examination should complete his work for the first professional dental examination and pass this at the end of his second year.

On the completion of the training in dental mechanics the student should join the General and Dental Hospitals, and at the expiration of eighteen months at the General Hospital should pass the second examination for the conjoint diploma. The final examination for the L.D.S. can be taken at the end of two years from joining the Hospital.

The student, during these two years, will have been attending simultaneously both the General and Dental Hospitals. During the remainder of his time he should devote himself to surgery, medicine and midwifery, &c., in which subjects he may be examined at the expiration of the required time from the passing of the second examination.

It is suggested that unless the obtaining of a dental qualification is urgent, students who have passed the preliminary science examination during their pupilage and the first professional at its conclusion should work at both hospitals for the first year and then take leave of absence from the Dental Hospital for six months, to be used in preparation for the second examination for the conjoint diploma.
